- 1922-23 famine in Admiralty Inlet when 13 people died.

p. 35. "In Admiralty Inlet the number of families is constantly changing; now, at any rate, one cannot speak of them as a ~~single~~ ^{separate} tribe, the Tununiroosirmiut, who are said to have had a certain amount of independence formerly. The principal winter settlement is Ulukssan at Arctic Bay; the spring is as a rule spent on Cape Crawford (Kagig), where they hunt narwhal from the ice edge and itog seal. In summer some of them move to Ulukssan, where they hunt narwhal from both boat and kaiah, and so on.

and Sinig are important grounds; in January they move back to Ulokssan, where they live upon the summer depots and the seals they catch at the breathing holes. It often happens, however, that some families spend the winter at the mouth of the fiord, where they hunt walrus from the ice edge and seal at the breathing holes. At Igakulik I counted 22 tent rings and 10 meat caches.
